Capital Times Sportswriter and ALCS Track Coach

Biggest difference in the last 10 years: Without question, the loss of my two brothers. Matt passed away in January 2002 and Chris in September 2005. They became my best friends, and I miss them terribly. I put a lot of things on hold these last few years, and honestly have sometimes struggled with the restarts.

Biggest surprises: That I've reached our 10-year reunion without a college degree (still working on it, though).

College: Bowling Green (OH) for two years in journalism; UW-Madison after that, first elementary education and then political science.

I've also lived in: Bowling Green and Madison

I've also worked at: MHHS as a track/cross country coach, and the Marriott as a part-time grunt

Travels: Several baseball road trips with my brothers; we've hit nearly every Major League ballpark. Also Hawaii, Puerto Rico, California, New York, Florida, South Carolina, Nashville, etc.

Notable/Exciting: My ALCS track teams won back-to-back conference titles; I've won a couple sportswriting awards; I was in the studio audience for the "My Kind of Town" show that aired on ABC last year

Hobbies: Photography, desktop publishing, messing around with websites

Dream come true: Coaching high school track and cross country

Still waiting for: A whole lot of things -- first and foremost, a wife and kids. Then the old college degree, a career, etc.

I get back home: I am back home

I keep in touch with: 20-25 classmates (loosely speaking); I could think of several more I'd like to be in touch with

What I'm most proud from school: Still thinking on that one (I'll have an answer by the reunion)

Regrets: A few (they'll be listed in the actual booklet)

Random Memory: I have several (also coming in the real booklet)

Secret Crush: Yeah, I had one (holding on to this one for a few more weeks too)

By our next reunion, I'd like to: Have a wife and kids, in our own house; finally have that blasted degree and a full-time job as either a sportswriter or a teacher, and have another five years of coaching under my belt
